

Sabba was the most amazing man I have ever known. Although I did not get the chance to know him all that well I still know how amazing he was. I am sure that all of you who got the chance to meet him or even here one of his stories know of his greatness.

There are many lessons that I can learn from my sabba. One in particular I will always take with me and keep in my mind, time. As my father has told me before and my brother reminded me the other day time was very important to sabba. He knew how valuable it was and he did not like to waste it.

Today we have many distractions that we often find ourselves wasting time. In the moment it seems there is so much time and you don't need to worry about it however we need to remember that it is limited.

Looking back I very much wish that I could have spent more time with my sabba. Unfortunately sabba started to become sick when I was very young. Since I was very young I did not see the value and importance of spending time with my sabba. As I grew older I started to really understand and I cherished the moments I could spend with him.

From my sabba I have learned very important things about time. The first is that a moment in time only lasts for a second but it is important to make those moments count so we can look back and remember good times. Things that only last a minute we can remember for a lifetime and the memories are more important than you think.

I also learned not to waste time because of its importance. From now on I will try to spend my time doing good things to make my sabba proud. I know that he lived his life in the most productive way and he was able to become very successful from that. I hope that one day I can become successful like my sabba and my grandchildren will look up to me like I to my sabba.

I always tried to tell myself that sabba could and would live forever. Even though now he is not physically with us, his memory and his greatness will live on forever.

Sabba I love you with all my heart and always will. Thank you so much for everything you have done for me and the world and thank you for everything you taught me.
